The Middle East fragrances market has witnessed substantial growth in the last few years. This is majorly attributable to the presence of young demography, upsurge in disposable income, and improvement in standard of living. However, the recent outbreak of coronavirus has significantly impacted personal care and cosmetics industries along with all stages of supply chain and value chain. It has further affected the consumer behavior with regards to purchasing cosmetics and perfumes in the Middle East.

Innovation stands as the linchpin driving the expansion of the Middle East fragrances market in terms of value sales. The escalating desire for diverse perfume offerings among consumers paves the path for manufacturers to introduce herbal or organic fragrance products at accessible prices and with eco-conscious packaging. Additionally, the surge in awareness concerning personal grooming among both individuals and working professionals has propelled the growth of the Middle East fragrances market.

Over the past couple of years, the traditional mass market fragrance business has witnessed a decline in its sales since the target customers seek for fragrance brands that are more upmarket. This has triggered demand for various perfumes in the Middle East.

Availability of premium products in the market has become necessity in recent years. This is attributed to the fact that these products minimize the gap between the price range of luxury and ordinary quality for middle-income group consumers. As a result, premiumization plays a key role in the overall growth of Middle East fragrance market. Presently, customers seek for superior quality while using consumer goods, including perfumes irrespective of their high-end price tags. This results in increase in demand for premium brand perfumes.

Beauty bloggers and social media influencers are creating new growth avenues for the market. Moreover, increase in advertisement along with product knowledge on social media sites such as Facebook, YouTube, Instagram, and Twitter has increased the awareness regarding perfume products, especially among millennial and generation X consumers of Middle East. In addition, large number of local YouTubers are now hosting popular channels to demonstrate product reviews and tutorials, which, in turn, drive the Middle East fragrances market growth.

Increase in penetration of various online portals in the Middle East and rise in number of offers or discounts attract large consumer base to purchase perfumes through online channels. Moreover, online sales channel has increased the consumer reach owing to which it has evolved as a key source of revenue for many companies.
