ALBUQUERQUE, NM, UNITED STATES, July 16, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- How do hops, barley, water, and yeast yield a favored summertime beverage? The answer lies in the Science of Beer.

Discover the nuances behind local brewing favorites at Explora's Science of Beer on Friday, August 23 from 7:00 to 10:30 pm. The Science of Beer features 14 local vendors spotlighting beer, cider, and mead, as well as local dishes, desserts, music, and homebrewing knowledge. Visit Ex Novo, Late Shift, Marble, Mystic Ambrosia, Sunday Service Motor Company, Harmon Lane by Southwest Grape and Grain, and Unhinged Brewing at separate stations throughout the museum, where guests can sample or purchase a menu of beers, ciders, and mead.

Tasty provisions from The Chocolate Dude, I Scream Ice Cream, The Munchie Truck, Three Sisters Kitchen, and more will also be offered on-site.

Guests can enter Explora's Makerspace to try activities while wearing Vision-Shifting Beer Goggles. Visitors can attempt stacking cups, walking a maze, and playing cornhole while simulating the effects alcohol has on their vision.

They'll also determine if they're part of the population's 75% with the genetic ability to taste phenylthiocarbamide (PTC), a bitter organic compound. Attendees can also check out exclusive beer talks by local homebrewing professionals and experience a blend of science, beer, and soccer with local favorites, Ex Novo and New Mexico United.

Plenty of curated Science of Beer games will be on hand for evening enjoyment as well. Visitors can learn how physics helps at gigantic Bucket Pong, explore probability in real-time at Dice Race,
