Trump raised his hand saying fight and it was very emotional for me. Ironically Rain From Heaven lyrics speak of raising our hands and singing with might for protection."

of the need for prayer and faith.

" I wrote "Rain From Heaven" to inspire and comfort the hurting and afflicted and those who persevere in strength yet still needing additional hope to stay in position, never imagining that it would be so relevant in the face of such a dramatic event and released at such a time as this," said Josie Brandon. "The song speaks to the need for this light and hope, especially during times when our nation faces the need to bring in clarity and remove confusion."

The chorus of "Rain From Heaven" reverberates with a powerful message: "Light, Shine Your Light, Shine Your Light In Here, So Bright, So Bright, Remove All Fear, Insight, Insight, Bring Insight In Here" These words have struck a chord with listeners, providing solace and a sense of unity as the nation grapples with recent events and repositions itself for hope and direction that leads us to growing in unity." Said Joe, a radio program director calling into the radio station to celebrate the song and the listeners resonating.

The song's release has sparked a groundswell of support and admiration. Those of faith from both the left and right express their belief that "Rain From Heaven" is the anthem that can bridge and guide our nation through these trying times, emphasizing its message of this light being the fight we need to overcome darkness and division.

"Rain From Heaven" is refreshingly bold and fresh for the music landscape today. "It was not overly produced and it was intentionally released exactly as is, as a directive from what I felt came from the Divine. I had no idea of it's timing being so relevant."

"When President Trump raised his hand saying "fight" it was very emotional for me. Ironically, Rain From Heaven lyrics speak of raising our hands and singing with might for protection. It's about calling in the Light. I believe God divinely protected President Trump and that Corey Comperatore is in heaven protecting his family, just as he did here. I also believe these moments bring us all closer together to examine our faith. I feel for everyone involved in this tragedy."

The Rain in the song symbolizes the need for bringing in the love and goodness of the Lights' presence.

Josie Brandon's song "Rain From Heaven" can be heard on positive and Christian radio stations everywhere. The music video was produced and placed on the Arizona healing workshop platform to support those needing a hopeful vision for our present and future.
