34 Years of Excellence in Custom Homes, Rebuilds, and Remodels

A Legacy of Passion and Innovation:

Matthew Harrigan's journey in building and design began at a young age. Encouraged by his family, he would spend hours as a child nailing wood blocks together, cultivating a natural affinity for construction. This passion grew as he explored wood shop, auto shop, and metal shop classes in middle school, and continued into high school. "While the other guys were cutting out wooden ducks, I was creating furniture," he recalls.

Matthew's passion for building extended beyond school projects. At age 15, he set up a wood shop in his family's garage and began selling various types of furniture including custom dressers, cabinets, and entertainment centers. He advertised his services in the Los Altos Town Crier and secured clients from the local community. One of his first and most memorable projects was an entertainment center for a client named Larry. Though Matthew charged $250 for the project, the materials costed $400, prompting him to take on additional projects to cover the costs. The finished entertainment center impressed Larry and provided Matthew with a valuable learning experience and a source of pride at a young age.

"Sometimes you choose your career and sometimes your career chooses you. In my case, this career chose me," says Matthew Harrigan, reflecting on the journey that began with a childhood passion for building and evolved into a thriving business. Under his leadership, the company has remained true to its core values: integrity, collaboration, rigor, continuous improvement, and proactiveness.
