/EINPresswire.com/ -- New York City Fire Department (FDNY) EMS leaders will deliver keynote remarks at HMP Global's 2024 EMS World Expo, sharing lessons learned from Ground Zero and the lasting impacts of the September 11, 2001 terror attacks on the emergency medical services and first responder community.

EMS World Expo will be held September 9-13 at the Las Vegas Convention Center. The keynote presentation, "The Impact on EMS & Beyond — A Conversation with FDNY EMS Leaders from Ground Zero," will be held from 9:30 – 10:45 a.m. Wednesday, September 11.

Panelists include FDNY EMS leaders Dr. Glenn Asaeda, Chief Medical Director; Cesar Escobar, Assistant Chief; and John J. Peruggia, retired Chief of EMS. The session will be moderated by Josh Hartman, a 9/11 first responder to the World Trade Center and Senior Vice President, Emergency & Mobile Medicine, HMP Global.

"On September 11, 2001, the largest terror attack to ever occur on U.S. soil took the lives of more than 3,000 people, including more than 400 emergency personnel — not to mention those who continue to lose their lives to illnesses resulting from the attack," Hartman said. "EMS World is committed to keeping their memories alive, as well as stressing the significance and impact of that day on younger generations of EMS providers as they enter the field."

The compelling roundtable of current and former FDNY EMS leaders will share first-person accounts of the 9/11 response, share lessons learned from Ground Zero, and review how 9/11 continues to shape the future of EMS and the personnel who deliver it.
