I can look at a distressed property and see past its flaws; I only see its potential. I'm a visionary, Prissssy said in a previous interview, highlighting her forward-thinking approach.”

Prissssy, known for her powerful voice and poignant lyrics, is making waves in the music industry with the release of her latest single, "Foreign Car." Is on You-Tube and Spotify, this track is a testament to her unique blend of creativity and authenticity.

But Prissssy is just getting started. This month, she is set to release two more tracks that delve even deeper into her personal experiences and advocacy through music.

"Dirty Laundry" is an empowering anthem for women, celebrating self-love and financial independence. Prissssy describes it as "very prissy," a song that encourages women to embrace their worth and power unapologetically.

"Healing" is a heartfelt reflection on Prissssy's own journey through heartbreak and betrayal. It explores the pain inflicted by narcissistic and unfaithful exes, disloyal friends, and toxic relationships with family members. This deeply personal track aims to resonate with listeners who have faced similar struggles, offering a sense of solace and solidarity.

As an artist, Prissssy, born Christina Bryan, is more than just a musician. Managed by Roland Dixon of Now Rule Entertainment, she has carved a multifaceted career that spans from real estate development to philanthropy. Raised in New York City by Jamaican parents, she learned the importance of independence and hard work from her single mother. At just 16, she began modeling and acting, and by 17, she had founded her own entertainment company in Queens, NY.

Her entrepreneurial spirit led her to launch a graphic design and print shop in Newark, NJ, and later, to immerse herself in real estate development. Prissssy has revitalized distressed neighborhoods, transforming rundown foreclosures into beautiful homes as a licensed realtor and interior designer.

Prissssy's philanthropic efforts are equally impressive. Through her nonprofit foundation, she is dedicated to providing safe housing for abandoned children, addressing the urgent need for nurturing and care in the foster system. "In Atlanta, children await foster care in hotels, which is unacceptable. Every child deserves nurture and care, and I am determined to make that change," she passionately stated.

Music remains a vital part of Prissssy's life, serving as a medium to express her creativity and to heal those who have faced similar trials and tribulations. As a single mother to a 7-year-old son, her commitment to her faith, spirituality, and her family's well-being is unwavering.
