

Unlock the Magic of Imagination with 'Grandma Helen's No No Room'

New children's book available August 6th.

PLYMOUTH, MASSACHUSETTS, USA, July 31, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Briley & Baxter Publications is excited to announce the release of Kari Kling's enchanting new children's book, "Grandma Helen's No No Room," set to hit shelves on August 6, 2024. This delightful story, inspired by Kling's own childhood memories and family history, invites young readers to explore the boundless world of imagination and curiosity.

In "Grandma Helen's No No Room," readers follow Katrina and her sister Linda as they grapple with their Grandma Helen's strict rule: never go through the mysterious set of double doors in her New York City apartment. What lies behind those doors becomes the subject of endless speculation and adventure, fueling the girls' imaginations with each visit.

Kling shares, "I wove pieces of my own family history into 'Grandma Helen's No No Room.' For instance, the main character, Katrina, represents me, as 'Katrina' was my nickname growing up. Additionally, the illustrations include watercolor paintings made by my twin boys for me when they were in first grade. Another illustration features a nod to 'Topper,' the childhood dog of my father."

The book is more than just a story; it is an invitation for children to engage their imaginations and ponder the endless possibilities that lie behind the ordinary. With whimsical illustrations by Asim Shafiq and a narrative rooted in Kling's cherished family memories, "Grandma Helen's No No Room" promises to inspire both young readers and their families.

Key Features:

- Imaginative Exploration: Encourages children to use their imagination to uncover the mysteries of the world around them.
