/EINPresswire.com/ -- India's phenol imports have surged to an impressive 4.2 lakhs over the past year, driven by the nation's growing demand within the thriving chemical and petrochemical (CPC) sector. As India cements its status as a premier manufacturing hub on the global stage, foreign investments are flooding in, accelerating sector growth.

Currently valued at $178 billion USD, India's CPC industry is projected to reach approximately $300 billion USD by 2025. The pandemic has prompted a diversification of the global CPC supply chain, leading companies to seek regions with lucrative business environments and favorable investment policies. India emerges as a prime destination for these investments, bolstered by Asia's increasing role in CPC production and sales.

A newly published report delves deeply into the CPC industry's landscape, focusing on individual states and union territories. This comprehensive analysis is a valuable resource for stakeholders, highlighting regional strengths and opportunities to aid efficient investment decision-making. The report's insights can be harnessed to unlock the industry's untapped potential and guide future evidence-based policymaking or incentives.

The report offers an extensive overview of India's CPC industry on both international and national fronts, highlighting key growth drivers and state-specific incentives. It also includes a state-level cluster analysis of the chemical industry.

Against the backdrop of the rapid growth in the chemical and petrochemical industry, the Rex Fuels Global Expo & Conference 2024 offers a timely and essential opportunity for industry participants. Scheduled for August 21-22, 2024, at the JW Marriott Marquis Hotel in Dubai, this
