Estimates suggest that a typical professional residential cleaning might result in approximately 11 to 22 pounds of CO₂ emissions. One mature tree can absorb about 48 pounds of carbon dioxide per year. Over a conservative lifespan of 40 years, this would amount to approximately 1,920 pounds (or about 0.87 metric tons) of carbon dioxide. This represents complete footprint mitigation, absorbing over 120 times more carbon than emitted on average.
