About the Author:

David "Dinodave" Fuqua was born and raised in the small town of Glendive Montana in an era when childhood freedom was a gift of rambunctious adventures. He graduated from Montana State University with a degree in biology and has recently taught high school for the last three years. Dave writes a column for the Ranger Review monthly and has had his morning radio show on KDXN in Glendive. Today he spends his free making videos for his YouTube channel and playing tennis when he is not out looking for dinosaurs.

His favorite moments in paleontology were going to Mongolia on a dig with famed paleontologist Jack Horner and being featured in the Dutch TV series "Dinojacht". You can follow him and his dinosaur adventures on YouTube. Ride along and reminisce with the potpourri of amazing humorous, heartfelt short stories presented in a way that only Dinodave can do.
