Increasing Air Pollution Drives Market Growth

The rise in air pollution is a major factor contributing to the growth of the PAPR market. Air pollution, characterized by harmful substances in the atmosphere, poses significant health risks. PAPRs play a crucial role in filtering out contaminants and providing clean, breathable air.

According to the World Health Organization, air pollution is linked to 7 million premature deaths annually, while the World Bank reports that the health damage from air pollution costs $8.1 trillion annually, equating to 6.1% of global GDP. This underscores the increasing need for PAPRs in combating air pollution.
