"It's important that we have designated spaces that center women, nonbinary, & trans people in tech and business- and we are helping make that happen by going bigger than ever at our New York Summit. We haven't been back to New York since before the pandemic and this year we're going to have events and activities from Fulton Street to the Pier. It's a full-on technology block party with indoor and outdoor stages, ping pong, basketball, reuniting our community, and welcoming all the new faces." said Leanne Pittsford, Founder and CEO of Lesbians Who Tech & Allies.

The New York Summit is perfect for beginning, mid-level and executive women, trans, nonbinary leaders, and allies. Over 230 speakers will cover software development, engineering, AI, technology trends, cybersecurity and privacy, leadership, the state of remote work, and recruiting for Diversity, Inclusion, and Equity within tech and business. There will also be speed mentoring, a career fair, and workshops.
