Dennis Jarvis will share insights on the critical role of decentralized AI infrastructure in driving the future of artificial intelligence, emphasizing CETI AI's commitment to providing robust, scalable, and decentralized AI server solutions. With extensive experience in the tech industry, including key roles at Apple, Rakuten, and DLT/FinTech startup Orb, Inc., Jarvis is poised to deliver a compelling perspective on the intersection of technology and human well-being.

"We are excited to participate in AI4 and engage with other leaders who are shaping the future of AI," said Dennis Jarvis, CEO of CETI AI. "Our mission is to ensure that AI infrastructure is accessible, efficient, and capable of supporting the next generation of AI innovations."

In addition to Jarvis's participation, Tony Evans, Chief Strategy Officer of CETI AI, will also be attending the conference and is eager to explore new opportunities for collaboration and partnership. Evans highlighted CETI AI's unique offerings for conference participants.

"We're here at AI4 to make deals and offer our state-of-the-art AI server solutions, including the NVIDIA H100 GPU, at special rates for attendees," said Tony Evans. "CETI AI is committed to forging strong partnerships that advance AI technology and make it more accessible to a wider range of industries."

CETI AI continues to lead the way in AI infrastructure, providing NVIDIA H100 servers and other cutting-edge technologies that empower organizations to harness the full potential of AI. The company remains dedicated to supporting decentralized
