also the hearts and spirits of those who call these towns home. "I grew up in a town of 600 people, and I know the warm memories I have of my childhood, so I have been heartbroken to see so many small towns on the verge of turning into ghost towns. It's my mission to shine some of the goodness of these people and places, revitalizing them through art," said Cal.

In the debut season of "Cal's Hometown Revival" Cal and crew will be highlighting towns in Texas including, Coleman, Brady, Waxahachie, Angleton, and Post. Each one of these communities has a rich history with lots of hidden treasures! From great places to eat, places to explore, things to do and see, places to shop and so much more! "So many of these towns have such cool stories and interesting people scattered throughout their history. And they all have great eateries, shops, and places to visit; I'm excited that my art can be the catalyst that gets to show you what these communities have to offer", Cal explained, "These towns and episodes have a little of everything! Great heartfelt stories to some crazy times! And I mean crazy! I shoot a Civil-era cannon, fly in an airplane with no doors, impromptu two-stepping in a dance hall, explore a hidden cave, feed crocodiles, ride in a rodeo, and stand toe to toe with a two-time PBR World Champion bull, learn to drive a race car, and way more!"

The production team also has small-town roots. Full Strut Media based out of Oklahoma is made up of Brad Clay and Adam Carter, both with small-town connections. Adam Carter resides in Wellston, Oklahoma, a small town northeast of Oklahoma City, and Brad Clay was born in Reydon, Oklahoma in the far western part of the state where he had just six kids in his kindergarten class. Brad had this to say about the show. "We have the same heartfelt memories as Calina does for small towns. They have been our homes, where we made unforgettable memories and Cal's Hometown Revival allows us to highlight some incredible towns, showing you hidden treasures of dining, entertainment, history, and much more. Then we top it all off with an amazing mural that captures the heart of the community and what it's all about. It's just a feel good show and to be honest I just feel like we all need a show like this today."

We invite you to tune in and join the family and fun of adventuring into the goodness of small-town America. Each episode promises to be an uplifting experience, filled with moments of joy, inspiration, and heartfelt connections. As Cal works her magic, you'll witness firsthand the profound impact that art can have in bringing people together, fostering a sense of pride, and revitalizing communities. "It happens every time I get to these towns I meet the coolest people doing the most amazing things. Now I get to take you first hand to explore these communities, and see all the reasons why I think small towns are going to save the world," Cal went on to say.
