Su Li, A Film Producer of "The Correct Way of Youth," Captures the Essence of Youth through Film

Su Li's journey with this film began with her recognition of its unique potential. A seasoned producer with a keen eye for impactful stories, Su Li knew that the script had the power to resonate with audiences on a profound level. Her ability to discern the commercial and artistic value of a script is rooted in her extensive background in the film industry, including her studies at Indiana University and Johns Hopkins University, where she gained a deep understanding of both Chinese and American film cultures.

Financing the film was no easy task, particularly during a challenging period for the film industry. However, Su Li's determination and strategic approach to securing funding proved successful. She collaborated with Director Yucai Liu, and together, they developed a feasible financial plan. Su Li focused on gathering funds from international markets, while Director Liu concentrated on domestic investors. Their combined efforts ensured that "The Correct Way of Youth" moved smoothly into production, overcoming the financial hurdles that often derail similar projects.

The process of bringing the film to life also involved significant creative input from Su Li. She saw the need to refine the original script to better align with contemporary audiences and to add layers of complexity to the characters. One of her key contributions was transforming the protagonist, Jian Tang, from a typical poor country boy into a rich playboy determined to prove his worth independently of his family's wealth. This change added depth to the character and made the story more compelling.

To bring this nuanced character to life, Su Li chose renowned actor Zheng Wang for the role of Jian Tang. Wang's experience and versatility as an actor made him the perfect fit for the dual demands of the role. His performance exceeded expectations, further elevating the quality of the film.
