well as his struggles against injustice and racism, ruminating upon them and sharing sagely lessons to his readers. Here he details the difficult journey he undertook and how he found peace after many years of searching for what was missing in his existence.

"The ultimate message to the reader is to seek peace and love in the world. That's the ultimate mission and realization." Chiwuta says. His book shows how he made his life-changing realization, an arduous process that spanned many years. He chronicles how he began as a young African man indignant and furious about the injustices of racism, colonialism, neo-colonialism and other systematic inequalities.

To overcome this he learned to peer into the other side and learn to see the world through the lens of those he was angry at, which helped him learn how to create something different. He shows his readers how to create more good in their lives by broadening their perspectives and understanding the nature of their struggles and conundrums.

Chiwuta shows readers the value of perceiving life through another human being's eyes, to try and figure out how others' minds work. By seeing life through the eyes and perceptions of other people, they can gain empathy and insight, crucial tools to help them navigate their own journeys.
