Growth Driver Of The Gluten Feed Market

The increasing consumption of meat and dairy products is expected to propel the growth of the gluten-feed market going forward. Meat products refer to products that are obtained or formed from animal tissues and used as food, served after cooking, or with the addition of condiments and seasonings. Dairy products or milk products refer to food products obtained or formed from the milk of cows, water buffalo, goats, and ewes. Gluten-rich foods form an essential part of animal diets in the meat and dairy industries, as they supply nutrients needed for high milk production in the dairy industry and provide high protein and other nutrients for strong muscles in animals in the meat industry.
