Secret Service Agent investigating Butler Scene

We are proud to make the entire bodycam footage accessible to the public. It's vital that citizens be able to see the real video for themselves as transparency is key to maintaining public trust.”

“We are proud to make the entire bodycam footage accessible to the public,” said Rudolph J. Migliore, President of MiglioreLaw. “It's vital that citizens be able to see the real video for themselves, so they can form their own informed opinions and continue to hold the government accountable. Transparency is key to maintaining public trust, especially in matters of such serious national importance.”

The bodycam footage, which shows the moments leading up to the assassination attempt, including the confrontation with the gunman and the actions of local police, provides a crucial perspective on the events of that day. Some of the video features local police officers describing the situation and openly criticizing the Secret Service, making it an especially reliable account, given that it was recorded just moments after the attempted assassination. By making this footage fully accessible, MiglioreLaw aims to support ongoing public discourse and ensure that the truth is fully visible to all.

“The release of this footage is a direct result of our persistent Right-to-Know Law requests and subsequent appeal,” Migliore added. “In addition to these efforts, we have also appealed a denial of a Freedom of Information Act request by the U.S. Secret Service and have pending requests with the Pennsylvania State Police. We believe in the power of transparency, and we are committed to continuing our efforts to provide the public with the information they need to hold their government accountable.”

The full, unedited footage can be viewed on our website at migliorelaw.com/butler and on our YouTube channel at youtube.com/asbestosattorney . We encourage everyone to watch the footage in its entirety and stay informed about the ongoing developments in this case.
