Rising Prevalence of Cardiovascular Disorders Drives Expansion of Cardiac Biomarker Market

The rising prevalence of cardiovascular disorders is a major factor propelling the growth of the cardiac biomarker market. Cardiovascular disorders, including coronary artery disease, heart failure, and stroke, are diseases that affect the heart and blood vessels. Cardiac biomarkers, which are released into the bloodstream in response to these conditions, provide essential diagnostic and prognostic information. For example, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported in May 2023 that coronary artery disease (CAD) was responsible for 375,476 deaths in 2021, underscoring the critical need for effective diagnostic tools like cardiac biomarkers.
