Rising Aging Population Drives Market Growth

The growing aging population is a significant driver of the Crohn's disease treatment market. As the proportion of elderly individuals increases, so does the prevalence of chronic conditions like Crohn's disease. According to the World Health Organization, the global population of individuals aged 60 and older is expected to double from 1 billion in 2020 to 2.1 billion by 2050. This demographic shift is anticipated to increase the demand for effective Crohn's disease treatments.
