

Elton Ilirjani – International Supermodel, Activist Conquers The Catwalks of Costa Rica Fashion Week

NEW YORK, NY, UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, August 27, 2024

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Ahead of New York Fashion Week, the Fashion World's attention is focused South on the 23rd Edition of Costa Rica Fashion week and its star supermodel, activist and philanthropist Elton Ilirjani who opened no fewer than four catwalk shows over 2 days for brands and causes including Maria Jose Chavarria Ruiz of the INA, AMAG by Nolys Rodriguez, UNFPA's Bodyright campaign and Weise.

Elton Ilirjani opened Costa Rica Fashion Week with a strong, show stopping performance for the latest creations by Maria Jose Chavarria Ruiz of the INA (Instituto Nacional de Aprendizaje) at Costa Rica Fashion Week 2024 at Antigua Aduana.

Elton Ilirjani followed this success with a second catwalk for Venezuelan brand AMAG by Nolys Rodriguez. AMAG is a brand that dresses modern and enterprising women with versatile, sustainable and elegant designs. Elton closed the show and gave a message of support for wheelchair model, Chavarria Campos Esteban. For more information about AMAG, please visit www.amagnr.com

Elton took part a second time in The UNFPA Bodyright Initiative which returned to Costa Rica Fashion Week with its continued mission to communicate messages about violence against women. This year the agenda has been expanded with an initiative against femicides. Those who took part including Elton and the actress Fedra remained silent as a sign of respect and at the end they joined hands and shouted the key message of the campaign, "Stop femicides! or You are not alone!". Elton also had the honor of both closing the final show of the Fashion Week by debut international presentation by Bolivian fashion brand Weise, and its designer Ericka Suarez Weise. Inspired by the Pirai River, an icon of Eastern Bolivia, the designer has created a collection that reflects the fluidity and energy of this natural waterway.
