"We are thrilled to be recognized in the AIFinTech100, yet again, " said Dave Dutch, CEO of Red Oak. "Since day one, our mission has been providing our clients the most advanced and efficient compliance solutions available, and artificial intelligence plays an obvious role in our continued evolution."

Red Oak's Advertising Review module uses AI to streamline the compliance process by identifying potentially problematic phrases in advertising materials in real-time, helping firms ensure compliance before submission. The software significantly reduces back-and-forth revisions, saving time, reducing costs, and minimizing risk.

"Compliance is a complex and ever-evolving field," said Mike Lubansky, Senior Vice President of Product Management. "Over the years, we fine-tuned intelligent lexicon flagging and text pattern matching algorithms and paired them with our proprietary rules engine—a foundation that perfectly positioned us to capitalize on the latest wave of AI."

McKinsey & Company recently reported that mitigating risk and legal challenges is the functional area in which traditional and advanced AI will offer financial institutions the greatest value.
