This authorization allows international students to enroll in Wayman College of Aeronautics' Associate of Science degrees in Aeronautics (Pilot). With the F-1 Visa, students can now fully immerse themselves in their studies while benefiting from extended opportunities for practical training. This includes up to 12 months of Optional Practical Training (OPT) post-graduation as a flight instructor or with U.S. airline and jet charter companies.

The opportunity to work is critical for international students. It is very difficult to build experience as a pilot around the globe and this is a world-wide career.”

“We are excited to welcome more international students through the F-1 Visa program,” said Wayman Eddy Luy, Vice President of Communication. “The opportunity to work is critical for international students. It is very difficult to build experience as a pilot around the globe and this is a world-wide career.”

Wayman College of Aeronautics, formerly known as Wayman Aviation Academy, has been a leader in aviation education since 1987. The institution's rebranding earlier this year reflects its broader academic offerings and renewed focus on providing a comprehensive educational experience. With this F-1 Visa authorization, Wayman College of Aeronautics continues to build on its legacy of training skilled pilots and aviation professionals who are making an impact worldwide.

International students at Wayman College of Aeronautics will have access to state-of-the-art facilities, advanced training equipment, and a curriculum that aligns with the latest industry standards. The F-1 Visa program enhances the College's ability to offer a truly global educational experience, fostering diversity and enriching the learning environment for all students.
