Geriatric Population Growth Fuels Positive Airway Pressure (PAP) Device Market Due to Increased Prevalence of Sleep Apnea

The growing geriatric population is a key driver of the positive airway pressure (PAP) devices market, particularly due to the increased prevalence of sleep apnea among older adults. As the size of the upper airway lumen decreases with age, obstructive sleep apnea (OSA) becomes more common. For instance, a report from the UK Parliament's House of Commons Library in June 2021 projected that by 2043, the senior population in the UK will rise to 24% of the total population, totaling 17.4 million people. This demographic trend is expected to significantly drive the demand for PAP devices.
