Growth Driver Of The Sprinkler Irrigation Market

The increase in public and private support for irrigation projects in developing countries is expected to propel the growth of the sprinkler irrigation market. The public and private sectors are complementing each other in providing advisory services and information to address the needs of rural communities and farmers. According to the World Bank Group, an investment of $2 billion is required to irrigate 1 million hectares of land in southern Ukraine. Public funds along with private sector solutions are essential for addressing the financing gap for large projects. Therefore, the increasing public and private support for irrigation projects in developing countries is driving the growth of the sprinkler irrigation market.
