Joe's journey with Southeastern Equipment began in November 2014 when he joined the accounting department. Joe shared, "It really came down [to] that I was looking for an accounting position at the time...for an entry-level position to start my career. Two Southeastern employees, Mike Townsend, and Travis Burris, let me know that one was available at the time, so I applied for the position, and the rest is history!" For seven years, he played a pivotal role in accounting functions and rental billing, showcasing his commitment to accuracy and efficiency. In 2022, Joe embraced a new challenge as the Retail Finance Manager, fueled by his desire for continuous learning and growth.

The company has worked toward new ways that I can quote on my end, It has allowed me to do my work more quickly so I can get the information to the sales team in a timely manner.”
