

"Help, Heal, Hope" Conversations to Livestream During National Suicide Prevention Week

SAVE - Suicide Awareness Voices of Education hosts local, state, national suicide prevention leaders, organizations for online discussions about their work

BLOOMINGTON, MN, UNITED STATES, September 4, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- SAVE - Suicide Awareness Voices of Education, a Minnesota-based national non-profit focused on suicide prevention, will present a series of conversations about the efforts of local, state and national organizations working to prevent suicide.

Hosted on the organization's social media platforms, Help, Heal, Hope: Suicide Prevention Week Conversations will highlight the critically important work of the public and private sector in raising awareness about and preventing suicide, and what each one of us can do to help save lives.

Monday-Friday, September 9-13, the series of 30-minute conversations will feature dozens of guests leading organizations focused on suicide prevention or advocating for underrepresented communities in the field.

Guests include:

Jaymes Black, CEO, The Trevor Project

Allison Ivie, Eating Disorders Coalition for Research, Policy & Action

Deb Stone, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC)

Nicki Reisberg, host, Scrolling 2 Death podcast
