Key Trends

Aging Population in India

India's aging population is increasing rapidly, with a significant rise in the number of people aged 60 and above. This demographic shift is driving demand for geriatric care services, including assisted living, home care, and nursing care services.

Growing Demand for Home-based Care

Home care services are becoming a preferred option for the elderly in India, as they allow seniors to receive healthcare services in the comfort of their homes. This trend is driven by an increasing number of nuclear families, urbanization, and a preference for aging in place.

Rise of Specialized Elderly Care Facilities

The establishment of specialized geriatric care centers and old age homes is increasing in urban areas, particularly catering to middle- and upper-class populations. These facilities offer services such as skilled nursing, memory care, and rehabilitation for age-related conditions.
