About the Diversity Visa Program

Established under the Immigration Act of 1990, the Diversity Visa Program aims to promote diversity within the U.S. immigrant population by offering permanent residency to individuals from countries with historically low immigration rates to the United States.

Applicants are randomly selected in an annual drawing, provided they meet the simple eligibility requirements, including being from a qualifying country and meeting specific educational or work experience criteria. Once selected, winners are eligible to apply for a green card and, ultimately, become U.S. citizens.
