EINPresswire.com/ -- NuGerm, a leading maker of inaccessible phone cases for K-12 education, is proud to announce a deployment of its revolutionary product, NuKase, in the Westfield Public Schools of Westfield, Massachusetts.

This initiative aims to help teachers and students combat classroom distractions by securing mobile devices during instructional time.

NuKase is an innovative phone case that locks mobile phones during class hours, encouraging students to remain focused on their studies. The Westfield school system is at the forefront of this pilot program, which will test the device in select classrooms to gather feedback on its impact on student engagement and productivity.

Michael Bordak, CEO of NuGerm, commented: "We are excited to partner with Westfield Schools for the deployment of NuKase. We believe this deployment will demonstrate the positive role the NuKase can play in fostering a more attentive and distraction-free learning environment."
