

University Games Unleashes The Dog Ate My Homework Game

University Games releases its new Dog Ate My Homework game. Now available online and in stores.

SAN FRANCISCO, CA, UNITED STATES, September 10, 2024 /

EINPresswire.com/ -- Back-to-school blues got you down? University Games has the perfect remedy—The Dog Ate My Homework! This new release takes the classic excuse and turns it into a fun game, letting players transform a mischievous dog's mess into a masterpiece of family entertainment.

Craig Hendrickson, SVP Product Development at University Games, jokes: "The dog ate my homework"—the excuse that's been hounding teachers for generations. It's so timelessly ridiculous, we just had to turn it into a game. Now, instead of barking up the wrong tree, it can be the star of your family game night!"

In The Dog Ate My Homework, players face off against a dog with a taste for homework. Players take turns feeding homework sheets into the dog's mouth, turning its ear, and retrieving the pieces from its rear end. The goal? Unscramble the shreds to correctly guess the hidden image before the timer runs out. Each successful guess earns a doggie treat, and the player with the most treats after three rounds is the winner.

The Dog Ate My Homework joins other University Games popular titles, including Kids On Stage, Scavenger Hunt for Kids, Bob Moog's Dad Jokes, Who Took My Nuts?, and Murder Mystery Party Games.
