

Republicans are Picking Up Union Endorsements this Election Cycle

The Political Landscape is Changing Inside Unions

LAS VEGAS, NV, UNITED STATES, September 19, 2024 / EINPresswire.com/ -- As the 2024 election cycle heats up, unions across the country are making their endorsements for political candidates. In a surprising turn of events, several unions have announced their support for Republican candidates, breaking from their traditional support for Democratic candidates.

Olson for Nevada Assembly District 17

The decision to endorse Republican candidates has caused a stir within the labor community, as unions have historically aligned themselves with the Democratic party. However, these unions believe that the Republican candidates they are endorsing align more closely with their values and will better represent the interests of their members.

I will do what is right for my district”

Bob Olson

One of the unions endorsing a Republican candidate is the American Federation of Government Workers (AFGE), which represents over 300,000 workers nationwide. The AFGE has endorsed Nevada's Assembly District 17 candidate, Bob Olson, citing his commitment to protecting Nevada's jobs and fair labor practices. The AFGE believes that candidates like Bob Olson will prioritize the needs of American workers and support policies that will benefit the labor community locally. As Bob says, “I will do what is right for the people in my district.” The AFGE letter is direct, to the point, and can be found at www.bobfornv.com. You can follow him on FaceBook: <https://www.facebook.com/people/Bob-Olson-For-Nevada/61554781843926/>

The endorsements from these unions have sparked discussions about the changing political landscape and the potential impact on the upcoming election. With unions traditionally being a key source of support for Democratic candidates, these endorsements could potentially sway voters and impact the outcome of the election.

As the election draws near, it will be interesting to see how these endorsements from unions will influence the political landscape and the decisions of voters. The unions endorsing Republican candidates are confident in their choices and believe that these candidates will best represent the interests of their members.

Robert Olsen,

The American Federation of Government Employees congratulates you on receiving our endorsement for Nevada's Assembly District 17. There are roughly 30,000 federal employees living in Nevada – caring for veterans, supporting the military, and getting Social Security recipients their benefits accurately and on time. There are more than 2,000 federal employees and retirees in Assembly District 17.

AFGE and AFGE District 12 have decided to endorse you for Assembly District 17 because we know that you understand our mission as a union representing federal employees. As Chief Steward for AFGE Local 1224 we have seen you fight on behalf of AFGE members time and time again. We know you understands the importance of our mission as federal employees, and we know we can count on you to respect and support our rights to having a union.

AFGE, AFL-CIO is the largest federal employee union in the country, representing 700,000 federal and D.C. government workers in all functions of government. AFGE represents more than 78,000 federal employees in District 12, which includes Arizona, California, Hawaii, and Nevada.

In Solidarity,

Ryan Mims
