Wound Debridement Market Definition

Wound debridement refers to the procedure of treating a wound in the skin by removing the dead skin from the wound. The debridement procedure helps in healthy tissue growth, minimizes scarring, and reduces the chances of infection. Depending on the wound, the type of debridement is selected on top of the form. Debridement can be done surgically or using non-surgical procedures such as the use of specific dressings and gels. The wound debridement helps to remove all the devitalized tissue from the wound bed and aid in faster wound healing.
