With the rise of remote work, we're seeing increased interest in Central America as a destination for digital nomads.”

James Dyde

Key findings from the study include:

1. Costa Rica emerges as the top overall destination for digital nomads in Central America, scoring 43 out of 60 points.
2. Panama leads in internet speed and stability, crucial for remote work.
3. Nicaragua offers the most affordable cost of living, ideal for budget-conscious nomads.

4. El Salvador ranks highest in safety, addressing a common concern for travelers in the region.
5. Costa Rica and Panama are currently the only countries in the region offering specific digital nomad visas.

"Our study aims to provide digital nomads with a general overview of what Central America has to offer," said James Dyde, editor of centralamerica.com. "With the rise of remote work, we're seeing increased interest in Central America as a destination for digital nomads. Our rankings offer valuable insights to help these modern professionals make informed decisions about their next move."

The study ranked the countries as follows:

1. Costa Rica
2. Panama
3. Nicaragua
4. Guatemala
5. El Salvador
6. Belize
7. Honduras

Each country was evaluated on a 10-point scale across six categories, with the total scores determining the final rankings.
