

NAPA Gathers Government Luminaries to Make Recommendations on Key Management Priorities Before Presidential Transition

WASHINGTON, DC, UNITED STATES, September 24, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The National Academy of Public Administration (NAPA), in collaboration with Cherry Bekaert, released a report highlighting the most pressing management challenges facing the U.S. government ahead of the 2025 presidential transition. The report, which captures insights shared by a group of senior government officials at AGA's 2024 Professional Development Training in Denver, outlines key priorities and provides recommendations for the incoming administration to enhance government efficiency, effectiveness, and public trust.

The report draws from a roundtable discussion that brought together senior representatives from a broad spectrum of federal agencies, including the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), the Department of the Treasury, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), and more. These leaders shared their candid perspectives on improving government operations and building a more responsive, accountable public administration.

National Academy of Public Administration President & CEO Terry Gerton emphasized the urgent need to address the declining trust in government, "It is essential we redouble our public administration improvement efforts. This report provides a roadmap for the next administration to implement meaningful reforms that enhance performance and restore public confidence in our institutions."

Srikant Sastry, Managing Principal of Advisory Services at Cherry Bekaert, added, "The input from these senior officials provides valuable, actionable insights that the next administration can use to sustain momentum and accelerate progress. The priorities identified in this report offer a blueprint for ensuring the federal government continues to meet the evolving needs of the American people."
