Fashion Collective is proud to announce its official launch as a platform dedicated to amplifying the voices of emerging fashion designers. Rooted in the vibrant cultural heritage of the Caribbean, the collective is the brainchild of Founder Xavier Walker, alongside Co-Founders Norka Vasquez and Stewella Daville. Together, they aim to create an inclusive and dynamic space where designers from around the world can showcase their unique creativity and artistry.

The Caribbean Fashion Collective's mission is clear: to foster creative expression while celebrating cultural diversity. While its foundation is deeply intertwined with the rich and colorful traditions of the Caribbean, the collective opens its doors to designers globally, offering them the opportunity to increase their visibility and grow their brands internationally. By providing a collaborative platform during New York Fashion Week and beyond, the collective is committed to supporting the next generation of fashion innovators.

Xavier Walker, a visionary fashion producer and creative strategist, is the driving force behind the Caribbean Fashion Collective. With years of experience in both the Caribbean and U.S. fashion scenes, Walker's dedication to providing a platform for emerging talent is unwavering. His vision for the collective is to unite the fashion world through the lens of Caribbean culture while embracing the global fashion community.

Norka Vasquez, an esteemed model and casting director with experience spanning national and international campaigns, brings her expertise in production and casting to the collective. A champion of body positivity and inclusivity, Vasquez's involvement ensures that the Caribbean Fashion Collective stays true to its commitment to diversity and breaking industry barriers.

Stewella Daville, a respected show producer and backstage coordinator, adds her extensive knowledge of fashion show logistics and management to the collective. Her background as a Model gives her a unique perspective, ensuring a seamless and empowering experience for all designers, models, and creatives involved.

Caribbean Fashion Collective's inaugural events will take place during New York Fashion Week, providing a global platform for designers to present their collections to influential industry professionals. With an emphasis on collaboration and cultural celebration, the collective is set to make a lasting impact in the fashion world.
