In the Bay Area, nearly one in four residents struggles to put food on the table. Research shows it takes a family of four $92,267 to meet basic needs in the Oakland metro area. However, 65% of ACCFB clients have incomes less than $28,290.

Food insecurity has far-reaching consequences, leading to health problems such as obesity, diabetes, heart disease, and mental health issues. It can also force individuals and families to spend a larger portion of their income on food or make trade-offs in areas like education or healthcare. Children facing food insecurity often struggle with school performance and concentration.
