A Commitment to Quality and Unique Approach
The journey of hardwork and dedication spans a much longer story.

For 50 years, we’ve stayed true to our roots, delivering household products of unmatched quality. Our growth reflects the loyalty of our customers, and we will always prioritise quality and innovation.”

The brand began as a modest family-run business that supplied spices and offered milling services to Wembely’s local community. With a deep understanding of the needs and demands of ethnic households, the store quickly expanded into housewares. By the late 1970s, they were known not just for spices but for quality cookware that catered specifically to the diverse cooking styles of the UK's growing multicultural population.

Sunil Popat shares, "We pride ourselves in adapting and growing with the evolving market. And to our surprise, this led to a huge kick in our brand recognition and building long-standing relationships with our customers, many of whom have been with us for generations."

Today, the store's products, such as Indian pressure cookers, are synonymous with quality and reliability. Now, there's no turning back, and families trust the products for their durability and performance.

Trends quickly shift, but the brand has successfully kept its finger on the pulse. The cookware range, for example, showcases innovation while catering to the specific cooking needs of ethnic cuisines, making it a staple in many homes.

"We believe in creating a harmony between heritage and progress. Our products meet the ever-evolving demands of today's kitchens. But, while chasing modernity, we don't believe in losing touch with traditional roots." said experts at Popat Stores

Empowering Homes Across Borders

While rooted in Wembley, the brand has extended its influence far beyond borders. The brand's reputation for quality has particularly resonated with overseas ethnic markets where products like their Indian pressure cookers have become kitchen essentials.

In fact, many customers abroad rely on them for hard-to-find ethnic kitchenware, solidifying the Sunil Popat addressed further, "Our growth over the last 50 years reflects the loyalty of our customers and our commitment to delivering only the best. We will continue to prioritise quality and innovation in everything we do."

Through thick and thin, the brand has maintained a strong focus on providing exceptional value for money. Whether stocking its shelves with blender and grinder systems, or carefully curated utensil sets, the Indian cookware UK has always focused on balancing affordability with quality.
