“

High-quality online courses are excellent options for schools struggling to fill vacant teacher positions and needing to expand course variety and resolve scheduling issues.”

Carol DeFuria, President & CEO of VHS Learning.

“High-quality online courses are excellent options for schools struggling to fill vacant teacher positions and needing to expand course variety and resolve scheduling issues,” said Carol DeFuria, President & CEO of VHS Learning. “Our partner schools put their trust in VHS Learning’s nearly 30 years of experience in online education, and many continue to do so year after year. We are dedicated to meeting instructional needs by offering engaging and rigorous courses led by certified teachers. Our goal is to not only help students succeed, but also help them discover a passion for learning.”

New U.S. schools participating this year include two Massachusetts high schools: Pembroke High School and Springfield International Charter School. Other new U.S. partners include Cannon School in North Carolina; The New Community School in Virginia, Colonial Virtual Program (CVP) in Pennsylvania, and Kinnelon Public Schools in New Jersey.

Earlier this year, six international schools became VHS Learning partner schools. Those schools included Berlin Brandenburg International School in Germany; Hsinchu International Academy in Taiwan; Ivy Collegiate Academy in Taiwan; JPED Academy in China; Mahindra International School in India; and Wesley International School in Thailand.

Recently added to the roster of new international schools utilizing the VHS Learning educational program are American Academy in Prague; American International School of Abuja in Nigeria; International School of Krakow in Poland; Jones International Christian Studies in Korea; L.T. Brown Experimental Education Institution in Taiwan; and Seoul International School in Korea.
