When we founded Three Peaks Painting, Su and I wanted to create a company where quality and service were non-negotiable, where we never cut corners, and where every client would feel valued.”

Myles Pemberton

Three Peaks Painting was born out of a shared vision. For Myles and Su, the dream was simple yet ambitious: to provide North Florida residents with painting services that went above and beyond typical expectations. The company's founding principles of Quality, Service, and Production—represented by the three peaks in their logo—continue to define everything they do, from the first consultation to the final brushstroke. This press release will delve into the rich history of Three Peaks Painting, the significance of their core values, the rebranding effort, the new website, and their mission to honor veterans and first responders.

A Dream Turned Into Reality

The idea for Three Peaks Painting began with Myles Pemberton's firsthand experiences in both the military and the painting industry. Having served in the military, Myles learned the importance of discipline, teamwork, and precision. These values stayed with him throughout his post-military career, leading him and his wife Su to establish a painting business that embodied the same principles of efficiency and integrity.

“The values I learned in the military—like attention to detail and the importance of following through—are the same ones I’ve carried into this business,” says Myles. “When we founded Three Peaks Painting, Su and I wanted to create a company where quality and service were non-negotiable, where we never cut corners, and where every client would feel valued.”

From its inception, Three Peaks Painting was designed to stand out. While many painting companies focus on volume, Myles and Su were determined to prioritize craftsmanship. Their goal was to provide clients with a painting service that could be trusted to consistently deliver on its promises—transforming homes, businesses, and properties with impeccable attention to detail.

As the business grew, so did the reputation of Three Peaks Painting. Word of mouth spread quickly, with clients praising the company’s dedication to quality and the ease of working with the team. Now, with a new website and refreshed branding, Three Peaks Painting is ready to take their business to the next level.

Three Peaks of Excellence: Quality, Service, and Production

At Three Peaks Painting, everything revolves around three core values: Quality, Service, and Production. These guiding principles not only set the company apart but also help ensure that every project is executed with the highest standards of professionalism and care. The company's new website and branding are both visual representations of these values.

New Website: A Modern, User-Friendly Experience

The newly launched website, <https://threepeaks-painting.com>, is designed to offer a seamless, modern experience for clients. The site is easy to navigate, providing visitors with comprehensive information about the company's services, examples of completed projects, and a simple online quote request tool. Myles and Su wanted the new website to reflect the high standards they hold for their business while also making it easier for potential clients to engage with their services.

We wanted to make sure it was as user-friendly as possible, so our clients can quickly find what they need and feel confident in choosing us for their next project."

Honoring Veterans and First Responders

One of the most significant aspects of Three Peaks Painting's mission is its commitment to honoring veterans and first responders. As a veteran himself, Myles understands the importance of giving back to those who have served their country and communities. That's why Three Peaks Painting proudly offers a 10% discount to all veterans and first responders.

“Giving back to veterans and first responders is something we feel strongly about,” says Myles. “It’s our way of saying thank you for their service. These individuals have dedicated their lives to helping others, and we want to do what we can to support them.”

Looking Forward: Raising the Bar in North Florida

As Three Peaks Painting continues to grow and evolve, the company remains committed to its founding values. The new website and branding are just the latest steps in their journey to provide North Florida residents and businesses with the highest level of painting service possible.

“We’ve come a long way, but we’re just getting started,” says Myles. “There’s always room to grow, and we’re constantly looking for ways to improve and better serve our clients. We take a lot of pride in what we do, and we’re excited about what the future holds for Three Peaks Painting.”

With their dedication to Quality, Service, and Production, Myles, Su, and the entire team at Three Peaks Painting are setting new standards in the painting industry. Whether it’s a residential home in need of a fresh coat of paint or a large commercial building requiring a full exterior renovation, Three Peaks Painting delivers results that speak for themselves.
