purpose-driven organization that builds and brands employers of choice, determines the awards through an employee survey.

The 2024 Top Workplaces for Remote Work award celebrates organizations with 150 or more employees cultivating exceptional remote working environments. LogicGate earned the award based on employee feedback. Results of a confidential employee engagement survey were evaluated by comparing responses to research-based statements that predict high performance against industry benchmarks.

“We are proud to be acknowledged by our own employees for our continued commitment to cultivating and investing in an outcomes-first culture. We trust and empower our teams to do their best work fully-remote, hybrid or in our HQ; offering flexibility and choice to what works best for them,” said Caroline Werner, LogicGate’s Chief People Officer. “We remain committed to building a culture where our people feel connected to the company and each other, supported in their career journeys, and are proud to come to work...whether that’s in our Chicago headquarters, from their homes or something in between.”

The Top Workplaces employer recognition program has a 17-year history of researching, surveying, and celebrating people-first organizations nationally and across 65 regional markets.

“Top Workplaces awards are a powerful tool for companies to attract exceptional talent,” said Eric Rubino, Energage CEO. “They showcase distinctive culture strengths and communicate a clear message to potential recruits: This is a place where you can thrive and excel.”

“These awards underscore the importance of listening to employees about where and when they can be their most productive and happiest selves,” shares Monster CEO Scott Gutz. “We know that this flexibility is essential to helping both employers and candidates find the right fit.”
