Cricket this year" said Karthik Leelasankar, Vice President, Business Operations, of MethodHub.

The tournament, organized in partnership with the Central Virginia Cricket Association (CVCA), is designed to give players more opportunities to play locally, minimizing travel and providing a competitive environment. "The CWCL was born out of a desire to give women and girls in the National Capital area more opportunities to play, reducing the burden of heavy travel expenses while ensuring that talent is nurtured at the grassroots level. The tournament aims to grow year after year, eventually becoming a well-established part of the women's cricket calendar" said Sree Mogulla of the CWCL organizing committee.

" Richmond's cricket grounds have previously been recognized for hosting successful tournaments, such as the Memorial Day event. The well-maintained grounds and supportive local community make it an ideal location for CWCL to debut. With plans to grow this league into an annual event, Richmond is now at the forefront of women's cricket development in the region" said Madhava Patibandla of the CWCL organizing committee.

"We are glad that MethodHub has chosen to sponsor the inaugural event and I am sure this is the start of a long term association" said Raja Sekhar Divakaruni of the CWCL organizing committee.
