“Our time in Utah shooting the first set of episodes was not only fun, but very special. It’s great to begin this new venture for the MCAA’s content opportunities. Future episodes will feature genuine conversations with MCAA Chairman (and part of the only father-son duo to do so) Dick Dentinger, Principal at The Vogel Group Stephen Borg, Foreman Development Course Instructors Tom Vacala, Donnie Williams, and Jameel Ervin, Safety Committee Co-Chair Zach Everett, and MCAA Secretary Melonie Leslie.

“The MASONRY STRONG Podcast is a heartfelt series of conversations with the people of the industry. Some are fun, some are informative, some are emotional. Our goal with the show is to capture a few casual moments in time with those who keep masonry strong. Having watched the first set of episodes, I think Justin’s charted our course to do just that. I’m excited for the future of the show,” said Dan Kamys, MCAA Director of Content.

The MCAA plans to shoot approximately 30 more episodes during the MCAA Annual Convention during the World of Concrete in Las Vegas. Suppliers in the Masonry Alliance Program’s Cornerstone and Platinum tiers will not only be able to provide 30-second commercials to be read during filming, but each will join the MASONRY STRONG Podcast for an episode.
