The global modified starch market is projected to reach

USD 17.52 Million by 2032 from USD 14.97 Million in 2023, at a CAGR of 2.5% from 2024 to 2032.

A flexible ingredient, modified starch can change the fundamental characteristics of native starch to meet the unique needs of different sectors. Modified starch has a wide range of uses due to its remarkable qualities, which include thickening, emulsification, and bulk water absorption. In addition to improving the quality of food and drink, it has revolutionized the paper and textile industries. Modified starch is now an essential component in the creation of goods in many industries since it may be used as an emulsifier, textural agent, and fat substitute. Modified starch's sophisticated processing technology has made it feasible to produce customized components that can address a variety of formulation difficulties.

Modified Starch Market Trends

In order to address the increasing demand for modified starches across a range of industries, investments in the starch market are increasing manufacturing capacity. Manufacturers can lower costs and benefit from economies of scale by increasing output, which raises profit margins and expands market share.

For example, Tate & Lyle PLC successfully acquired an 85% stake in Chaodee Modified Starch Co. Ltd ('CMS'), a reputable Thai maker of tapioca-modified food starch, in February 2021. In the primary tapioca-producing region of Eastern Thailand, the investment developed a dedicated production plant and increased Tate & Lyle's position in specialist tapioca-based eateries.

More significantly, more and more starch producers are making investments in the European market for starches and sweeteners in order to boost the local economy and community and set up their companies for long-term success. By increasing production capacity, creating novel goods, streamlining the supply chain, and enhancing customer interactions and brand image, rising investments in the starch market can foster growth. As a result, increasing investment in the manufacturing of modified starch to meet the growing demand is anticipated to support market expansion throughout the forecast period.

Key questions for stakeholders and business professionals looking to grow their position in the Global Modified Starch Market:

- Which region is expected to offer the most opportunities for market growth after 2023?
- What business risks and impacts are affecting market growth in the current scenario?
- What are the most promising high-growth opportunities in the Global Modified Starch Market by application, type, and region?
- Which segments are expected to attract the most attention in the Global Modified Starch Market in 2023 and beyond?
- Who are the major players in the Modified Starch Market, and how are they evolving?
