Bathroom fixtures and accessories with a focus on waste disposal and personal cleanliness are referred to as sanitary ware. Examples of sanitary ware include urinals, bidets, sinks, bathtubs, showers, and toilets. These items are essential for preserving cleanliness and hygienic conditions in bathrooms and are often manufactured from sturdy and simple-to-clean materials like porcelain, ceramic, or stainless steel.

According to the sanitary ware market analysis, the global market is analyzed on the basis of type, material, and region. By type, the market is divided into toilet sinks/water closets, wash basins, pedestals, and cisterns. Among these, the toilet sinks/water closets segment occupied the major sanitary ware market share in 2022 and is projected to maintain its dominance during the forecast period. The demand for fixtures that use less water is being driven by concerns about sustainability and water conservation. The use of smart and touchless technologies is growing in popularity because they improve user convenience and help maintain cleanliness. Modern bathroom fixtures are in greater demand owing to the rise in urbanization and construction in emerging markets. The interest in self-cleaning and the use of antimicrobial materials is also being fueled by growing health and hygiene concerns, particularly post-pandemic. The sanitary ware market is therefore fueled by a combination of environmental awareness, technological advancement, and changing consumer preferences for sanitary ware that is more effective and hygienic.

By material, the market is segmented into ceramics, pressed metals, acrylic plastics, Perspex, and others. The pressed metals segment is anticipated to grow at a moderate rate during the forecast period. In the market for sanitary ware, pressed metals like stainless steel and aluminum are gaining popularity due to several sanitary ware market trends and growth factors. For contemporary bathroom fixtures, these materials are appealing to consumers because of their strength, corrosion resistance, and sleek appearance. Pressed metals' capacity to be recycled is an advantage considering the rise in sanitary ware market demand for environment-friendly and sustainable products. There is an increase in the demand for durable, water-efficient sanitary ware. This is driving the demand for pressed metal sanitary ware products in the global market.
