“We're excited to deepen our presence across the HomeServices of America network with Long & Foster, who pioneered an all-inclusive real estate experience. We look forward to providing Long & Foster agents and homeowners with home warranty coverage that defies expectations,” said Jorey Ramer, CEO of Super.

“Our partnership with Super represents our continued commitment to providing the most seamless, stress-free experience in real estate, from homebuying through homeownership,” said Patrick Bain, president and CEO of The Long & Foster Companies.

One of the key features that sets Super apart is its focus on creating an "own like a renter" approach for homeowners. Unlike traditional providers, Super offers a comprehensive solution that goes beyond insuring breakdowns. With Super’s powerful technology platform, homeowners can easily coordinate repairs, schedule appointments, and track the progress of their repairs—all through a simple and intuitive app. This end-to-end coordination ensures that homeowners no longer bear the burden of managing repairs themselves, saving them time, effort, and stress. By investing in technology, Super provides a streamlined, worry-free experience for homeowners with more protection than traditional home warranty companies and with fewer out-of-pocket costs.

The partnership launched in September in the Washington, D.C. metro area, and over time, Super’s home warranties will be available to all Long & Foster agents across the East Coast. Super’s partnership with Long & Foster follows the announcement of its launch with Interio, both part of an encompassing partnership with their parent company, HomeServices of America.
