The 2024 Annual Virtual Appendix
Cancer Multi-Regional Symposium, presented by the Appendix Cancer
Pseudomyxoma Peritonei Research

Foundation (ACPMPP), will be held on November 1, 2024. Co-sponsored by leading medical institutions including Yale Cancer Center, Atrium Health Levine Cancer, and University of Utah Huntsman Cancer Institute, this symposium will bring together top scientists, clinicians, and healthcare professionals to discuss advancements in the treatment and research of appendiceal cancers.

This year's event promises to be a pivotal moment for advancing the understanding and treatment of appendix cancer, a rare and distinct form of cancer that often presents significant challenges in diagnosis and management. The symposium will focus on translating the latest scientific findings into clinical practice, highlighting breakthroughs that are transforming patient care in the field.

Key Topics and Scientific Highlights:

- Mock Tumor Board: Creating a Treatment Plan
- Updates: Papers of the Year for Appendiceal Cancer
- Snapshot of Select Hot Topics
- Ask the Experts

The virtual format will allow participants from across the globe to engage in real-time discussions providing a unique opportunity for cross-disciplinary learning and collaboration. The event is designed for patients, caregivers, oncologists, researchers, surgeons, and other healthcare professionals specializing in rare cancers and complex malignancies.

Moderators

The 2024 symposium will feature over 14 experts in their fields and leading surgical oncologists including:

- Dr. Edward Levine, Atrium Health Levine
- Dr. Laura Lambert, Huntsman Cancer Institute
- Dr. Kiran Turaga, Yale Cancer Center and Smilow Cancer Hospital

Symposium Goals:

With the support of ACPMP and Yale Cancer Center, University of Utah Huntsman Cancer Institute and Atrium Health Levine Cancer, the 2024 symposium will provide a platform to:

- Foster international collaboration and research partnerships to accelerate advancements in the field.
- Translate the latest scientific discoveries into innovative clinical practices.
- Improve treatment protocols and patient outcomes through evidence-based research and novel therapies.
- Increase awareness and understanding of appendix cancer among the broader medical community.

Who Should Attend:

This symposium is geared toward patients, caregivers, medical professionals, researchers, and students with an interest in oncology, surgical oncology, gastroenterology, molecular biology, and patient advocacy. Attendees will gain invaluable insights into the latest advancements in appendix cancer and other peritoneal surface malignancies.
