If your business wouldn't function without your employees, implementing ways to show appreciation is a no-brainer. That's where we come in.”

Taking the team outside is a fun way to reset your mind and enhance creativity. Going outdoors for your next strategic planning or brainstorming session will help clear your head before clearly defining objectives or sharing innovative ideas.

“Our team doesn't think inside the box – it's just our nature to be creative and venture out. The amazing experiences we put together are intentional, designed to push boundaries and encourage teams to get out of their comfort zones. Sometimes, in ways they never expected. It's pretty awesome to see,” said Lauren Meyer, Marketing Director at AVT. “From our experience, the companies that give their employees a chance to travel with the team somewhere new or go on an exciting adventure out of the office, are the ones that show significant changes in workplace culture for the better.”

Meyer continued, “Companies that want to build trust, spark creativity, and allow quality time for their team to bond while learning new skills are the ones that we believe will succeed. If your business wouldn’t function without your employees, implementing ways to show appreciation is a no-brainer. That’s where we come in. AVT retreats and events are a fun, memorable way to show you’re invested in the team and positively impact your business.”
