At Fetch we recognize the profound impact that pets and people have on each other. We want to protect that bond through support for organizations helping pets in need and their people.”

Hilary Palotay, Director of Corporate Responsibility

Building on last year's campaign, which raised over $401,000, Project Street Vet empowered veterinary teams to provide professional, non-judgmental medical care to over 1,200 pet families facing homelessness and housing vulnerability across nine cities. This achievement was supported by more than 120 volunteers and over 100 community partners, including social service organizations and pet clinics.

Project Street Vet Founder and CNN Hero Award recipient, Dr. Kwane Stewart, expressed his gratitude, noting, "The incredible support we received last year allowed us to expand our reach and enhance our services. This year, with Fetch's commitment to match donations, we anticipate helping even more pets and deepening our engagement in the communities we serve."

Director of Corporate Responsibility at Fetch Pet Insurance, Hilary Palotay, echoed this sentiment. "At Fetch we recognize the profound impact that pets and people have on each other. We want to protect that bond through support for organizations helping pets in need and their people. Project Street Vet brings critical veterinary services to those most in need and we are proud to host the campaign once again this year."

The funds raised will enable Project Street Vet to enhance its volunteer recruitment and training programs, and provide a wide range of services from basic examinations to life-saving treatments. This initiative also supports the follow-up care and more complex medical needs of pets served by the organization.

Fetch's partners for this year's campaign at launch include: Warburg Pincus, SPRYFOX, The Vernon Company and Solomon Page.
