LOUISVILLE, CO, UNITED STATES, October 18, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ --

The Pro's Closet, a national new and used bike retailer, has made the difficult decision to shutter its 130,000 square foot Louisville CO facility. TPC was founded in Boulder 18 years ago by pro mountain biker Nick Martin. It sought to take used bike sales, which is traditionally facilitated by bike shops and local online marketplaces, and go national. It bought high-end bikes directly from owners and refurbished them before reselling them on the TPC website. The company raised over $90 million from investors over the years, however post pandemic demand declined and economic conditions has forced the company to close its facility.

This is an amazing opportunity for the general public, bike enthusiasts and other business owners”

The company is liquidating everything onsite including tools, equipment, bicycle parts, warehouse equipment, racking, electronics, office furniture, décor, and other assets. “This is an amazing opportunity for the general public, bike enthusiasts and other business owners” says Gabriel Prado, Founder and CEO of LocalAuctions.com. “Rarely does the public get a chance to bid on and purchase assets from a company like this”.
